application. See 37 C.F.R. 1.137(f) if a notice of subsequent foreign or International filing required by 35 U.S.C. 12(b)(2)(B)(iii) and 37 C.F.R. 1.213(c) is not filed within forty-five (45) days after the date of filing of the foreign or international application.

The only difference between the original Request Form and the updated Request Form is that the updated Request Form describes the consequence of its filing in the Note reproduced above. With this being the only difference between the two Forms, each should be afforded similar treatment for purposes of notice under the Statute, particularly given the absence of Statutory requirements on the form of notice. Whether or not the Request Form is supplemented by an explanation of the consequence of its filing, the act of filing remains unchanged - and so to should its consequence.

Applicant points out that the goal served by their filing of the original Request Form was the same as the goal that would have been served by filing an updated Request Form -- publication of the underlying application and harmonization of procedures for international applications, whether initially filed in the United States or abroad. To treat the act of filing of these two Request Forms differently serves no purpose.

Moreover, three points inform our Petition for recognition of Statutory notice based on the filing of the Office's original Request Form: (1) the Statute has no requirements for the form of notice, (2) the Office recognizes that the act of filing a Request Form serves as a form of notice under the Statute, and (3) Applicant's filing of the original Request Form effected the same effects of publication and harmonization that were effected by the updated Request Form. It is for these reasons that Applicant requests recognition of Statutory notice based on their filing of the original Request Form.

The Request was filed with the intention of satisfying the Statute. As such, Applicants contend that, to the extent that the Request did not give notice of foreign filing as required by the statute, any delay in giving such notice was unintentional. Moreover, Applicants also hereby explicitly give the required notice.

Please charge $130.00 to our Deposit Account No. 06-1050 for the required fee.

Respectfully submitted,
